The City of Summit Charter

On April 11, 1899, thirty years after separating from New Providence and Springfield to become a political entity, the citizens of the Township of Summit adopted the Charter of the City of Summit.

Since 1899, the State has passed laws superseding many of the original provisions of Summit's Charter.

On December 15, 1987, Chapter 314, Public Law 1987, was approved and signed into law with the effective date of January 1, 1988, repealing Summit's original charter.

Summit's Charter, as it now exists, is available on the City website: www.cityofsummit.org.

The Mayor and Common Council

The Mayor is the chief executive officer of the City, elected at large directly by the voters of the City for a four-year term. The Mayor serves part-time and does not receive compensation for the performance of his/her duties.

While the Mayor does not preside over Common Council Meetings, or have a vote as a member of the governing body (Common Council), s/he may participate in any deliberation of the Common Council, break a tie vote of the Common Council on an ordinance or resolution, and has veto power over ordinances which can be overridden by a two-thirds vote of Common Council.

Common Council is the legislative body and consists of seven members: six elected from two wards for staggered three-year terms, and one at-large for a two-year term. Common Council members serve part-time and do not receive compensation for the performance of their duties.

Each January at the Organization Meeting, Common Council elects its President/presiding officer and establishes its committee members for the current year.

Common Council powers consist of: adopting ordinances; reviewing, revising and adopting the budget; making appropriations; levying taxes; authorizing bond issues; fixing salaries; establishing general municipal policies; initiating hearings to gather information, air public problems, and supervise the spending of its appropriations.
